Welcome

The Office of Adventist Mission operates six Global Mission Centers in key locations around the world. Their purpose is to help Adventists to know how to build bridges of understanding and friendship with people from major world religions and philosophies. These Centers help us understand the beliefs and cultures of other world religions and equips Adventists to interact with them in social and business settings. We believe that an informed Adventist can better represent God when they understand and respect the beliefs and cultures of others around them.

The web site for each Center is listed below. We invite you to visit these websites and to learn to know your neighbors.

THE REPUBLIC OF PALAU

Return to PALAU

Melissa Gibson meets the man who killed her family when she was a 10-year-old missionary girl.

L. Ann Hamel is a part of the International Service Employee (missionary) Support Team of the General Conference. She has a PhD in psychology and a doctor of ministry degree in international counseling. Having served as a missionary and experienced personal traumatic loss, she has gained a greater sensitivity and understanding of how to support missionaries in crisis. She and her husband, Loren, live in Berrien Springs, Michigan.

On December 23, 2003, I received a call from the General Conference informing me that a missionary family had been murdered on the island of Palau. Only a 10-year-old girl had survived. I was asked to go and provide care for her and support for the local church community.

I flew from Michigan, United States, on Christmas morning, praying throughout the long journey that Melissa would experience the healing presence of Jesus. Although I was trained to treat the impact of trauma, I had never before encountered trauma of this magnitude, particularly in one so young. My prayer was that God would protect Melissa from the impact of all that she had experienced.

When I landed in Palau, I was taken to meet Melissa at the Koror Seventh-day Adventist Church, the church that her father had pastored. She was a beautiful child—petite with dark brown hair and fine facial features. Although she was quiet, her demeanor didn't reflect what she had experienced in the previous few days.

New home in the Pacific

Back in June 2002, Melissa's parents, Ruimar and Margareth

DePaiva, accepted a call to serve as missionaries in the Republic of Palau, an island country located in the western Pacific Ocean. The family adjusted quickly to their new life. They made friends easily and became part of the local community.

Ruimar was responsible for coordinating the Adventist work on the island, and Margareth taught at the academy. They both played a very nurturing role in the lives of the student missionaries who worked at the school and often invited them to their home. Melissa remembers that her mother loved to cook and host large groups of people from the church.

Their home was outside the city on the road leading to the academy. The only other house close by belonged to the principal, but it was being remodeled, so no one lived in it. Each day, numerous construction workers passed by the DePaivas' home on their way to work on the structure.

Melissa loved Christmas, and on the evening of December 21, the sights, sounds, and smells of the holiday filled the DePaiva home. The tree had been put up early, and now there were presents under it, not just for Melissa and her older brother, Larisson, but also for the student missionaries. Margareth began preparing food well ahead of time for the many guests who would join them for the holiday. Their home smelled of freshly baked bread and pastries, and their refrigerator was full of wonderful Brazilian food.

Ruimar had been away at meetings in Guam. He was an accomplished pianist and enjoyed playing, so after a meal together, his playing filled the home with beautiful Christmas music. Melissa remembers her mother playing a board game with her and Larisson before they had to go to bed. The following day would be Ruimar and Margareth's 15th wedding anniversary. Melissa smiles as she recalls telling her parents that she would sleep with them as an anniversary present. She fondly remembers her parents tucking her into their bed and her father singing her to sleep. He then returned to finish a project before coming to bed himself.

The attack

As the family slept that night, an intruder entered their home through the kitchen window around three o'clock in the morning. He was one of the construction workers who had been working on the principal's house. Melissa awoke to find both parents out of bed and heard a terrible noise in the hallway.

During the next few minutes, the man murdered Melissa's parents and brother and then tied her up and put her in his trunk. He told her that she was now his property and drove away with her. The following day, he left her alone in the house while he went to work. But that evening, beginning to fear discovery, he took her to a remote part of the island, strangled her, and threw her into a ravine.

News of the event reverberated around the world: The murder of a missionary family. Three caskets. The people of Palau's shame and remorse for what happened in their country. The president's public apology. The queen, a member of the Koror Seventh-day Adventist Church, attending the national funeral.

Life back in the United States

Understanding the importance of giving Melissa a sense of home and belonging, her paternal grandparents, Itamar and Ruth DePaiva, brought her back to Michigan, United States, where she and her family had lived before going to Palau.

Her mother's parents, Pastor José and Marina Ottoni, came from Brazil and stayed for several months to be with her. Melissa understood that she couldn't continue living in Palau, but she hadn't wanted to leave her home there. She said that one day she would return.

A year and a half later, the DePaivas moved to Texas, where Melissa graduated from grade school, then academy, and then college. In July 2016, she married Michael Gibson. She graduated with a nursing degree from Southwestern Adventist University, and Michael graduated with a theology degree. A few weeks after their wedding, they moved to Berrien Springs, Michigan, where he attended Andrews Theological Seminary and she worked as a nurse.

Heart changes in prison

A few months before Melissa and Michael's wedding, I had the privilege of meeting Pastor Tiago Cunha and his wife, Claudia, in Thailand during a cross-cultural missionary training event. Originally from Portugal, Pastor Cunha was serving as the senior pastor of the Koror Seventh-day Adventist Church in Palau. Soon after beginning his ministry there, he had felt impressed to participate in the church's prison ministry program, which had been started by Melissa's father.

Not long after entering the prison, Pastor Cunha met Justin, the man who had murdered the DePaiva family. Justin was a hardened criminal serving three

Inside Story

INSIDE STORY~ DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF CONGO ↑

Attacked With Acid

By Andrew McChesney, Adventist Mission

Banza Mwela, the pastor of a Sunday church in the Democratic Republic of Congo, nearly died when his wife and son doused him with skin-burning acid on the day of his baptism into the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

But Banza, his face permanently disfigured, clung to life and today is an Adventist lay pastor preaching a powerful testimony that draws crowds to Jesus.

“I praise the Lord that I belong to the Seventh-day Adventist family and that the devil has been defeated”, Banza said.

The story began in October 2013 when Banza attended an evangelistic campaign in the southeastern city of Likasi. Keen to know more about Adventist doctrines, he enrolled in the pastoral training school at the local Philip Lemon University.

On the day of his baptism, Banza returned home, happily singing a hymn about the power of Jesus. As he entered the house, his adult son lunged toward him and threw a pail of sulfuric acid on his face and body. Blinded and burning with pain, Banza cried out in agony and crumpled onto the floor.

Banza’s wife and son, enraged that he had left their church, had plotted the attack and hoped that he would die on the spot, said Robert S. Muhune, president of the East Congo Union Mission.

“But fortunately a miracle happened”, he said. “The man didn’t die”.

Neighbors heard Banza’s cry and rushed him to the hospital.

Doctors weren’t sure that he would make it. He lost an eye and most of the skin on his body. He spent weeks in intensive care, and skin grafts and other reconstructive plastic surgery are continuing even now. The Adventist world church has helped cover the expensive operations.

Banza’s wife and son disappeared after the attack and are on the run.

While Banza remains in pain, he spends little time in the hospital bed. He actively shares his testimony in churches and at camp meetings. His favorite Bible passage is Isaiah 43:1-3, which he reads as he shares his story: “But now, thus says the Lord, who created you, O Jacob, and He who formed you, O Israel: “Fear not, for I have redeemed you; I have called you by your name; You are Mine. When you pass through the waters, I will be with you; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow you. When you walk through the fire, you shall not be burned, nor shall the flame scorch you. For I am the Lord your God, the Holy One of Israel, your Savior; I gave Egypt for your ransom, Ethiopia and Seba in your place”.

Dear Church Leaders,

The shopkeeper was clearly a Greek Orthodox Christian. His bushy eyebrows and distinctly-shaped nose showed me he was Greek. The large crucifix around his neck and the many icons and pictures of saints on his walls showed me he was Orthodox.

He was a friendly guy and wanted to practice his English. So he asked me where I lived. I said "Right here in Cyprus."

He was not expecting that answer. Curiously he asked "Well, what do you do here?"

We bantered lightly back and forth a little and finally I told him "I work for the Seventh-day Adventist Church."

"Church!" he almost spat out the words. "CHURCH! Well, what do you believe?"

I knew that in his mind, there was only one church. You were either Orthodox or you were heretic. There was no in between.

My mind called out a prayer for help and I said, slowly, "I believe Jesus died for my sins and is coming back to..." But my voice trailed off as I saw I had already lost him. No longer angry, he was staring vacantly out the door behind me.
